Writing Conclusions:

- Include a brief summary of the paper’s main points, but don’t repeat things in your paper.
- Never introduce new ideas in a conclusion!
- Do not flip the intro!
- Avoid phrases like "in conclusion," "to conclude," "in summary," and "to sum up." The reader knows it is your last paragraph.
- Leave the reader with an interesting final impression!

Both the atom bomb and the helicopter revolutionized the 1940s. These inventions influenced not only the 1940s, but history as well. In fact, these inventions are still important today. The present world would be so different had they not been created.

(if you completed your works cited and got a 10/10 – or there are no computers available – begin writing a rough draft of your conclusion!

HOMEWORK: Write conclusion, complete works cited page, and start typing final draft!